Youth Work Ireland

INTRODUCTION

I am very pleased to welcome you to Equality 17, Youth Work Ireland's 2017 Consensus Conference.

This is a day for all young people, youth workers, volunteers and supporters of young people to celebrate how far we have come to achieve a more equal Ireland and to be inspired to take further steps towards addressing the many inequalities in Irish society.

I would like to take a moment to be clear about what I mean by equality. Our concern as an organisation is solidarity with and support for anybody who faces inequalities in accessing services, achieving in education, living healthy lives, having a sense of well-being and making a full contribution to society because of who they are. The engagement of equality is comprehensive of the nine grounds, but also includes other emerging equality issues in Ireland such as homelessness and social exclusion and poverty.

I think that all of us who work with young people, probably share the view that our work on Equality is a continuation of our work as champions for all young people to realise their potential and to be their true selves, unlimited by discrimination or prejudice. And I'm sure that most people reading this would agree with me that equality is not about treating everyone the same, sometimes equality is about providing extra support to people who need it, and making provision to ensure there is equal access for all.

We know from our research that young people want to get involved in equality initiatives. So, if you are a young person, if you work with young people, this day should offer you opportunities to find things you can do to become involved. Through this event:

- We provide connections and inspiration from our Equality 17 partners and our members.
- We provide a new equality resource providing information and suggested actions for young people, youth clubs and projects to become involved in working towards equality.
- We provide training and information on new programmes and projects that support young people's equality.
- We bring together officials, experts and young people with real experience who can help to inform and inspire you.

Finally, today sees the launch of a new initiative to support the further implementation of the Youth Work Ireland Monaghan Detached Model of Practice. This model of practice reaches the most isolated and marginalised young people. Given the impact this model has in relation to social inclusion, it is an ideal initiative to feature at an Equality focused event.

I want to thank you for taking the time to be with us and hope you enjoy the day as much as I will.

DR. PATRICK J. BURKE, CEO YOUTH WORK IRELAND

EQUALITY CREW 17

Equality 17 is Youth Work Ireland's year of work to provide opportunities for young people to become involved in supporting initiatives that promote equality in Ireland for all. We know from our work with young people, that they are some of the tolerance in the world, Equality 17 sought to support young people who embraces equality, progress and change, to become involved and active through events, activities and workshops across the country.

The theme of Equality was chosen by a year-long consultation and consensus campaign with young people, staff and volunteers, at last year's National Consensus Conference. In focus groups and discussions leading up to this vote, young people told us that they were concerned about issues such as Black Lives Matter, the backlash against feminism in media, the rise of populist and far right political movements and Brexit. They felt that young people had a role in challenging these trends, and becoming more active and involved, to support a fundamental belief in the value of all people. Through the Equality 17 campaign we have sought to support young people to tell their stories of what being young and equal in Ireland in 2017 really means to them.

Throughout 2017 the work of Equality 17 has been youth led by a group of young people – the Equality Crew, made up of young people from across Youth Work Ireland's Member Youth Services. These young people have been involved in the planning and delivery of today's event and we would like to thank them for their input, energy and work on Equality 17:

CONSENSUS PROCESS

EQUALITY 17

Youth Work Ireland is a federation of 21 Local Member Youth Services and a national office. Local Member Services work with 116,000 young people every week through their 1,088 staff and 6,721 volunteers. As a federation, we support our members to deliver an Integrated Youth Services Model to young people in their communities. This means that young people around Ireland can avail of a whole range of services and supports if and when they need them.

OFFERS THE OPPORTUNITY
PEOPLE, YOUTH WORKERS AND VOLUNTEERS
TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE

As part of Youth Work Ireland's Consensus Process we engage in a deliberate way with all sections of our membership, including young people, staff and volunteers to combine their views and opinions with our practice. Through this process we promote our work, develop our practice, improve our services, campaign for young people and strengthen our Federation.

The stories that young people in our services tell us demonstrate the need for support to achieve equality and the value of the contributions that progressive youth work can make to bringing about equality in the lives of young people and in Irish society.

It is through young people that we are telling the story of what our services do to bring about this outcome. In fact, Youth Work Ireland member services are full of stories of how they support Equality. This year, our services participated in Learning and Sharing workshops across the country, which saw hundreds of young people take part in telling their stories of what it means to be young and equal in Ireland in 2017. From these events seven young people were invited to share their stories on stage today.

DETACHED PROGRAMME

YOUTH WORK IRELAND CAVAN / MONAGHAN

The Detached Youth Work Programme in Youth Work Ireland Cavan Monaghan is an outreach programme that engages with vulnerable and socially excluded young people, and helps them connect with supports that will aid them in addressing their needs and achieve successful outcomes. While the target population for this programme may have needs in relation to issues as diverse as mental health, sexual health and homelessness, most young people engaged struggle with substance misuse.

The Detached Youth Worker's goal is to improve the outcomes of youth lives in the short term as well as the long term by focusing on their individual well-being and their social interactions in the community in which they reside. This includes working to improve the youth's self-esteem, self-awareness, and empowerment. Building individual confidence in the youth helps the youth in the future because they will then be more independent, less inclined to engage in high risk behaviour, and have better overall health. The social implications for the youth include more stable family life, improved well-being, and increased community cohesion. In the long term, the youth are more likely to stay in school, so they are more likely to have better jobs and the community overall will be safer.

SINCE THE PROGRAMMES LAUNCH IN MONAGHAN IN 2015, A RURAL AREA, IT HAS MADE A SIGNIFICANT IMPACT ON THE COMMUNITY.

The evidence proving the effectiveness of youth work are found in the case studies investigated by researchers and there are five main factors contributing to a positive impact. First, youth workers act as a bridge between the youths and their families which helps youths build trust with adults. Second, youth workers let the youths make decisions, so the youths feel as though they still have some independence. Next, youth workers have holistic approaches to problem solving rather than focusing only on one problem at a time. Fourth, youth workers can act as an advocate for the youth to prevent the youth from being marginalized. Finally, youth workers have sustained contact with the youths which makes their long term goals achievable.

OUR VISION... "THAT ALL YOUNG PEOPLE IN OUR AREAS OF WORK ARE EMPOWERED AND SUPPORTED TO BUILD BETTER COMMUNITIES, WHERE THEY ARE HAPPY, LISTENED TO, RESPECTED AND VALUED AS INDIVIDUALS, TO REALISE THEIR POTENTIAL."
