

PROMISING PRACTICES

in LGBTQI + Youth Work

Thursday, September 28th 2023, Youth Work Ireland National Office, 11am - 3pm

This event will explore and share the extensive practice experience that exists in supporting LGBTQI+ young people in youth work settings that have been shown to achieve positive outcomes.

This event is part of the Proud Spaces project, funded by Erasmus+, that is seeking to identify promising practices in LGBTI+ youth work. Promising practices are methods that have been shown to work effectively to produce successful outcomes.

Youth work specific supports for young LGBTQI+ people have existed in Ireland for many years and range in service and policy objectives. However in some European jurisdictions supports for the inclusion and human rights of young LGBTQI+ people are being contested and eroded though deliberate policy objectives. This event will provide the opportunity to learn how we can be allies in defending the such practices.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This event is open to those who work with young LGBTQI+ people and want to learn more about the promising practices that achieve positive outcomes.

SPEAKERS

- Bella Fitzpatrick, Executive Director IGYLO
- Dominik Kuc, GrowSpace

Promising Practices in LGBTQI+ Youth Work

Youth Work with Young LGBTQI+ People

As practitioners we are now able to describe, share and promote an extensive body of effective, evidence informed youth work practices with young LGBTQI+ people that achieve positive outcomes. This event will :

- Engage the participation of practitioners to further our understanding of promising practices in LGBTQI+ youth work;
- Consolidate our understanding of promising practices as they relate to LGBTQI+ youth work;
- Share evidence of our practices that achieve impact and outcomes for young LGBTQI+ people;
- Disseminate the findings and evidence from the Proud Spaces project, thus far;
- Consider and understand the steps we can take as allies in promoting youth work practices across Europe as a way of supporting and advocating with and for the LGBTQI+ community and those who work to defend it.
